

Potholes on the Journey

It's far worse in many other countries! We once saw a such a huge pothole in Washington DC that someone had laid a bedframe in it to allow vehicles to get across. Let's count our blessings.

On our journey with Jesus, which way is the right way - the left or the right? We can get wrapped up in semantics, or we can simply trust that Christ will guide us round, or even through, the potholes of life without drowning the nearby pedestrian with a wave of water.

The fact is, we may often find ourselves travelling along the wrong side of life's right-way and causing a neighbour to be drowned by our thoughtlessness. We may all have experienced being drenched by someone else's carelessness. That's life. The best travel aid in life is a sense of humour – so let's thank God for the ability to see the funny side of stuff that isn't life-threatening: it saves a lot of unnecessary anger and distress. And if we do get 'drowned' let's remember we were created with waterproof skin.
